Notes on investment products and diversification

An investor (or class of investor) may intend to hold a product as part of a diversified portfolio (for example, with an intended product use of minor allocation). In such circumstances, the product should be assessed against the investor's attributes for the relevant portion of the portfolio, rather than the investor's portfolio as a whole. For example, an investor may seek to construct a balanced or moderate diversified portfolio with a minor allocation to growth assets. In this case, a product with a High risk/return profile may be consistent with the investor's objectives for that minor allocation notwithstanding that the risk/return profile of the investor as a whole is Medium. In making this assessment, distributors should consider all features of a product (including its key attributes).

The FSC has provided more detailed guidance on how to take this portfolio view for diversification, available on the FSC website.

The investor prefers exposure to defensive assets that are generally lower in risk and less volatile than growth investments (this may include cash or fixed income securities).
Income Distribution	The investor seeks to invest in a product designed or expected to distribute regular and/or tax-effective income. The investor prefers exposure to income generating assets (this may include high divided-yielding equities, fixed income securities and money market instruments).
Investor's Intended Product Use (% of Investable Assets)
Solution/Standalone (up to 100%)	The investor may hold the investment as up to 100% of their total investable assets. The investor is likely to seek a product with very high portfolio diversification.
Major allocation (up to 75%)	The investor may hold the investment as up to 75% of their total investable assets. The investor is likely to seek a product with at least a high portfolio diversification.

Investable Assets	Those assets that the investor has available for investment, excluding the residential home.

Investor's intended investment timeframe
Minimum	The minimum suggested timeframe for holding the product. Typically, this is the rolling period over which the investment objective of the product is likely to be achieved.
Investor's Risk (ability to bear loss) and Return Profile
Low	For the relevant part of the investor's portfolio, the investor: • has a conservative or low risk appetite, • seeks to minimise volatility and potential losses (e.g. has the ability to bear up to 1 negative return over a 20 year period (SRM 1 to 2)), and • is comfortable with a low target return profile. The investor typically prefers stable, defensive assets (such as cash).
Medium	For the relevant part of the investor's portfolio, the investor: • has a moderate or medium risk appetite, • seeks low volatility and potential losses (e.g. has the ability to bear up to 4 negative returns over a 20 year period (SRM 3 to 5)), and • is comfortable with a moderate target return profile. The investor typically prefers defensive assets (for example, fixed income).
High	For the relevant part of the investor's portfolio, the investor: • has a high risk appetite, • can accept high volatility and potential losses (e.g. has the ability to bear up to 6 negative returns over a 20 year period (SRM 5 or 6)), and • seeks high returns (typically over a medium or long timeframe). The investor typically prefers growth assets (for example, shares and property).
Very high	For the relevant part of the investor's portfolio, the investor: • has a very high risk appetite, • can accept very high volatility and potential losses (e.g. has the ability to bear 6 to 7 negative returns over a 20 year period (SRM 6 or 7)), and , • seeks to maximise returns (typically over a medium or long timeframe). The investor typically prefers high growth assets (such as high conviction portfolios, hedge funds, and alternative investments).
Extremely high	For the relevant part of the investor's portfolio, the investor: • has an extremely high risk appetite,

	• can accept significant volatility and losses, and • seeks to obtain accelerated returns (typically over a short timeframe). The investor seeks extremely high risk, speculative or complex products which may have features such as significant use of derivatives, leverage or short positions or may be in emerging or niche asset classes (for example, crypto-assets or collectibles).
Investor's access and liquidity
Daily/Weekly/Monthly/Quarterly/Annually or longer	This investor attribute addresses the likely period of time between the making of a request for redemption/withdrawal (or access to investment proceeds more generally) and the receipt of proceeds from this request under ordinary circumstances. Issuers should consider both the frequency for accepting the request and the length of time to accept, process and distribute the proceeds of such a request. To the extent that the liquidity of the underlying investments or possible liquidity constraints (e.g. ability to stagger or delay redemptions) could impact this, this is to be taken into consideration in aligning the product to the investor's need to access capital. Where a product is held on investment platforms, distributors also need to factor in the length of time platforms take to process requests for redemption for underlying investments. Where access to investment proceeds from the product is likely to occur through a secondary market, the liquidity of the market for the product should be considered.
Distributor Reporting
Significant dealings	Section 994F(6) of the Act requires distributors to notify the issuer if they become aware of a significant dealing in the product that is not consistent with the TMD. Neither the Act nor ASIC defines when a dealing is 'significant' and distributors have discretion to apply its ordinary meaning. The issuer will rely on notifications of significant dealings to monitor and review the product, this TMD, and its distribution strategy, and to meet its own obligation to report significant dealings to ASIC. Dealings outside this TMD may be significant because: • they represent a material proportion of the overall distribution conduct carried out by the distributor in relation to the product, or • they constitute an individual transaction which has resulted in, or will or is likely to result in, significant detriment to the investor (or class of investor). In each case, the distributor should have regard to: • the nature and risk profile of the product (which may be indicated by the product's risk rating or access to capital timeframes), • the actual or potential harm to an investor (which may be indicated by the value of the investor's investment, their intended product use or their ability to bear loss), and • the nature and extent of the inconsistency of distribution with the TMD (which may be indicated by the number of red ratings attributed to the investor).

	Objectively, a distributor may consider a dealing (or group of dealings) outside the TMD to be significant if: • it constitutes more than half of the distributor's total retail product distribution conduct in relation to the product over the quarter, • the investor's intended product use is solution/standalone, • the investor's intended product use is core component or higher and the investor's risk/return profile is low, or • the relevant product has a green rating for investor's seeking extremely high risk/return.
